Garpanchkot - The History

Damodar Sekhar, established Panchkot Raj probably during early 90 AD with the help of Sardars of Jhalda and expanded his kingdom over several other parganas. To give recognition to the main five (panch) clans (khunt) of the locals the kingdom assumed the name Panchkot. Panchkot is locally known as Panchet, was a part of an ancient East Indian kingdom known as Rajchakla Panchkot. Panchkot Raj was probably a part of Takampa Kingdom. Telkupi was capital of Takampa Kingdom and a village under Raghunathpur police station, was submerged with the construction of Panchet Dam.

Garpanchkot garh was a part of the Singh Deo dynasty of Panchkot located at the southern foothills and a group of temples are still standing as mute spectators of the rise and fall of the dynasty. The temples are of different architectural styles, the principal one being a 'Pancharatna' temple accompanied by 'Jor-Bangla' type and more than one 'Pirha' type temples made of stone. The Pancharatna temple still carries some depleted but exquisite piece of presumably pre-muslim period terracotta work on its arches and pillars. 500 meters away and a bit uphill from the main ruins of the Garh Panchkot, lies 'Dhara' a perennial spring channeled through a 'Cow mouth' made of stone.

Places to Visit

In Garpanchkot 'Garh' was a part of the Singh Deo dynasty of Panchakot located at the southern foothills and a group of temples are still standing as mute spectators of the rise and fall of the dynasty. The temples are of different architectural styles, the principal one being a 'Pancharatna' temple accompanied by 'Jor-Bangla' type and more than one 'Pirha' type temples made of stone. The Pancharatna temple still carries some depleted but exquisite piece of presumably pre-muslim period terracotta work on its arches and pillars. 500 meters away and a bit uphill from the main ruins of the GarhPanchkot, lies 'Dhara' a perennial spring channeled through a 'Cow mouth' made of stone.

Panchet Dam has been constructed a little above its confluence with the Barakar. While Dhanbad district is on the northern bank of Panchet reservoir, Purulia district is on the southern bank. Panchet Hill rises above Panchet Dam. The Panchet Dam is an earthen dam with concrete spillway. The reservoir taps a catchment area of 10,961 square kilometres (4,232 sq mi). The Panchet Dam has a storage capacity of 170.37 million m<sup>3</sup> to dead storage and 1497.54 m<sup>3</sup> to top of gates. Two units of 40 MW have been installed for power generation.

Near Mandandi, on the southern lower slopes of the Panchet hill, it is the site of an old temple which has now disappeared. Asunkenlinga is approached by steps into a pit with a modern superstructure. Many stone fragments with architectural mounding and incisions are lying about, some have been reused for making the steps up the hill. Fragments of amalaka and finial suggest the former existence of a rekha-deul here. A Nandi bull near another ancient linga and the pedestal of an old image. Apart from Birinchinath, modern painted clay-images of Radha-Krishna and Sarabhuja Jagaddhatri are worshiped in the modern structures.

Joychandi Pahar is a very popular tourist attracted hill in the Indian state of West Bengal. It has an average elevation of 155 m (509 ft). It is 3 kilometers from the sub-divisional town of Raghunathpur, Purulia district. It is on the Purulia – Barakar road, is a popular tourist center and major attraction for rock climbing.

Maithon Dam is located at Maithon, in the state of Jharkhand, It is 15,712 ft (4,789 m) long and 165 ft (50 m). high. This dam was specially designed for flood control and generates 60,000 kW of electric power. There is an underground power station, the first of its kind in the whole of South East Asia. The dam is constructed on the Barakar River. The lake is spread over 65 square kilometres (25 sq mi).

The Kalyaneshwari temple 6 km away from the Maithon dam is considered to be the seat to a very powerful deity, Ma Kalyaneshwari. The temple was erected in the early 1900s. Kalyaneshwari is a 500-year old centre of Shakti worship. The present temple, however, is not very old and was constructed by Panchakot Raj. The temple of Goddess Kalyaneshwari is believed to fulfill the wishes of childless women.

Baranti is a small, quiet and scenic place. There is a 2 km long irrigation project dam, located between two small hillocks, Muradi Hill and Baranti Hill. Baranti is in the vicinity of Ramchandrapur Irrigation Project. A grand view of the reservoir from Baranti. It is part of the wonderful Rarh countryside and wonderful picnic spot.
